

Indigenous Leaders

Scholarship and Internship, Australia

“At McKinsey, I have received incredible support to grow as a young Indigenous professional. I am learning how to achieve thoughtful and effective change for my community.”

Noah Bedford, Indigenous Leaders Scholarship and Internship 2019 winner

McKinsey & Company believes in developing outstanding leaders who are passionate about creating impact. We want to support your personal and professional growth through a $15,000 scholarship and a paid consulting internship in one of our Australian offices. In certain situations, Indigenous Cadetship Support can be facilitated.

Eligibility

To be eligible for the opportunity you must be:

- An Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander student currently enrolled in an undergraduate or postgraduate degree study
- A strong verbal and written communicator
- A problem solver who enjoys being challenged
- Able to bring people together to drive change
- Ready for an opportunity to develop your talent and knowledge.

We will provide an interview buddy for all shortlisted candidates to help with preparation.

Applications

To apply you must submit:

- A one-page cover letter that demonstrates how you meet the eligibility requirements and your areas of interest
- Your resume
- An official copy of your academic transcripts.

Please compile all the above documents into one PDF and submit your application at www.mckinsey.com/ils. A shortlist of applicants will be invited to interview once applications are closed.

Key dates

- 20 June 2019 – Discover McKinsey information session<sup>1</sup>
- 5 July 2019, 9:00pm AEST – Application deadline
- August 2019 – Interviews for shortlisted candidates commence
- January 2020 – Internship commences

<sup>1</sup> This session is open to all Indigenous students interested to know more about management consulting and about McKinsey & Company. To register, please email AU-Recruiting@mckinsey.com with the subject: "ILS Information Session".